Innovation itself is nothing new. Ever since mankind developed stone tools, our innovativeness has been documented. On the other hand, measuring and benchmarking a country's innovation performance, as well as developing national policies to nurture innovation, are comparatively new. Within this context, an innovation policy expert from Intelligentsia Consultants has assisted six countries from the former Soviet Union.

The expert has provided training and analysis support in several key areas: i.) how to measure and benchmark national innovation performance using the European Innovation Scoreboard; ii.) how to thoroughly document a national innovation system using the Inno Policy Trend Chart methodology; and iii.) how to develop innovation policies to address gaps in national innovation performance and national innovation system drawing upon international examples of innovation policy best practise.
